An aerial photograph of a landscape. A winding river flows through a dry, brownish terrain. Several white birds are captured in flight over the river. On the right side of the image, there are several circular stone structures, possibly terraces or wells, with concentric rings. The overall scene is a mix of natural and man-made elements.
